JONES IS SENTENCED TO BE HANGED FOR KILLING EVANS

CASE WAS ONE OF THE MANY CRIMES COMMITTED NEAR LEWISBURG DISTRICT

Birmingham, Ala., May 31.—The jury in the case of Walter Jones charged with the murder of Lawson B. Evans, on the Lewisburg road October 3 last, after being out all night returned a verdict this morning in the criminal court before Judge Greene, finding the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree as charged in the indictment and fixing his punishment at death. John C. McPhaul was foreman of the jury.

The defendant with his mother did not flinch when the verdict was read by the clerk of the court. R. B. Daniels of the counsel for the defense, announced immediately after the verdict was read that an appeal to the Supreme court would be taken. The jury was polled.

Evans was shot and killed while riding in a buggy with a man named Jack Payne last October en route from Lewisburg to North Birmingham. The shot was fired from ambush on the hill overlooking the road.

This is one of two cases that the grand jury investigating the murders in the Coalburg-Lewisburg section of the county worked up. A confession was given by Jones after he was told of the evidence that had been secured against him. The case was tried inside of two days before Judge Greene.

Two weeks ago Walter Jones was convicted and given a life term penalty on a charge of killing Jack Holt, a negro on Cat mountain in the western part of the county last year. An appeal of the last mentioned conviction will be taken before Judge Cabaniss tomorrow by his attorneys.

JUDGE ORDERS GOLDSTEIN TO ROAD FOR 30 DAYS

Selma, Ala., May 31.—Sam Goldstein, a well known blind tiger operator was arrested at Benton Friday morning and brought back to Selma and placed in the county jail. Monday morning Mr. Goldstein will begin the serving of a thirty days sentence in the convict gang on the public roads of Dallas county.

At a previous session of the Circuit court the grand jury returned five indictments against Mr. Goldstein for violating the prohibition laws. He plead guilty to two of the counts and paid the fines assessed.

EXCURSION WILL BE RUN TO PANAMA CITY

Many Dothan people will visit Panama City and St. Andrews Bay tomorrow when the Shaw and Taylor excursion will take place. The train will leave Dothan at 6 a. m. and returning will leave Panama City at 7 p. m.

REJECTED BY WOMAN YOUTH COMMITS SUICIDE

Berlin, May 31.—The orchestra in a crowded cafe on the Unter den Linden was playing "Quand l'Amour Meurt" early the other morning, when the crack of a revolver made the musicians throw down their instruments and the public spring in alarm from their places.

A young man had entered the cafe at midnight, had ordered a glass of beer and sat at one of the little tables apparently enjoying the music and the gay scene. His foreign appearance and handsome face arrested attention and it was noticed that he was constantly looking at the door as though expecting somebody. At half past one o'clock he bought a picture post card and a stamp from an attendant and asked for ink to write a message on it, which he was seen to read once fully several times. A little before two the youth rose and asked the conductor of the orchestra to play "Quand l'Amour Meurt." He returned to his place and with eyes half-closed hummed the sickly melody of the decadent song of modern love.

Suddenly the youth started from his reverie, thrust his hand into his pocket, drew a revolver and pressing it against his right temple, fired. Some guests ran into the street and several women fainted. A crowd of men and waiters surrounded the wounded man who had fallen back on the velvet seat. He was found to be still living when the police entered the cafe and they took him in a cab to the Charite Hospital, where the doctors stated that there was no hope of recovery. The message on the post card made it clear that the young man was in love with a woman who had rejected him.

There was an epidemic of suicides in Berlin this week. A lady hanged herself and her two children of eight and ten years in a bed room at a fashionable hotel and a boy of twelve hanged himself in an outhouse.

AUTO GRIFFIN ALLOWED BOND AT UNION SPRINGS

Otto Griffin, who is alleged to have shot and killed Max Davis at Union Springs, in Bullock county several weeks ago and who since the tragedy was held in the Montgomery county jail until he was given a preliminary hearing at Union Springs Thursday, has been allowed bail in the amount of $3,000.

The trial was had before Justice of the Peace J. K. Franklin at Union Springs and owing to the prominence of both of the young men who were born and reared at Union Springs, the trial, it is said, was the most largely attended of any preliminary hearing ever held in the Circuit Court room of Bullock County. Among the attendants were more than a hundred prominent women of Union Springs.

The testimony at the trial bore out very closely the reports of the tragedy as at first related in The Advertiser, the only new testimony being to the effect that Davis struck Griffin with brass knuckles just before he is alleged to have shot him.

Friends of Griffin contend that he had gone to the store of J. H. Feagin and Son where Davis was employed with a view of offering an apology and explanation about previous differences when the fight between them is alleged to have occurred. The men according to testimony at the trial had not been on the best of terms for some weeks.

The trial occupied the entire time of the court at Union Springs Thursday, involving, on both sides of the case some of the most able legal talent in the State. Montgomery Advertiser.

BABY STRANGLES TO DEATH

Memphis, Tenn., May 31.—Curly headed, blue eyed Dora Catherine Schwartz, four months old, slowly strangled to death here late yesterday when she in some unaccountable way became pinioned between the brass rod on which she had been placed and the wall of the room where her parents, unconscious of the little one's danger, were at supper.

No outcry was heard from the baby and her condition was not discovered until the mother entered the room after finishing the meal. Mrs. Schwartz swooned and today is in a serious condition.

MOSELY PITCHING FOR ENTERPRISE BEATS DOTHAN

Mosely, the former Dothan pitcher who was released in Enterprise Thursday, stood on the mound for the Coffee county boys yesterday afternoon and beat Dothan by a score of 2 to 1. Although the score was not so high the boys had beat especially as the one the day before when we mopped up with Enterprise to the tune of 6 to 0 but the box score reveals quite a number of errors on Dothan's side and so many hits on the other side.

HANLEY THINKS COLONEL ROOSEVELT IS A BUNGLER

MAN IS KILLED IN PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Kenosha, Wis., May 31.—Michael Volukus was killed here last night in a peculiar accident. While working with a tube connected with a compressed air tank the escaping air came in contact with the flesh which was torn away.

The air with a pressure of 100 pounds to the square inch was forced into his intestine. The man's internal organs were dislodged and torn as were the muscles.

The man lived for four hours after the accident but did not regain consciousness. The police heard that some of Volukus fellow workmen had been responsible for the man's death by trying to play a practical joke and an investigation was started.

WAS ANOTHER EFFORT MADE TO BLOW UP FLOWERS HOME?

UNKNOWN MAN SLIPS IN BACK GATE OF YARD BUT RUNS WHEN SEES GUARD

At a late hour last night some unknown man slipped into the back yard of the J. D. Flowers home on North Oates street where the dynamiting occurred Tuesday night but was scared away at the sight of the night watchman who has been guarding the house since the dynamiting occurred. According to the guard the man had slipped into the back yard while he was making his rounds about the front of the place and when he returned to the back the man darted out of the gate. As to what this means it remains a question unsettled as to whether or not another attempt was made to wreck the home or whether it was just someone rambling around in the night.

The officers have done nothing on the case yet or rather nothing that has been made public. It was thought at first that a detective might be put on the case but if one has been secured it is of course a secret kept from the public.

No new developments have resulted in the case so far. The house was dynamited Tuesday night and badly damaged. Officers visited the scene Wednesday morning. Workmen have gone back to work and are repairing the damaged building. A watchman is keeping guard over the building every night for fear of a [illegible] second attempt.

AT THE SENN-SATION

SAYS THIS COUNTRY WOULD BE IN THROES OF WAR WITH MEXICO IF EX-PRESIDENT WERE IN WHITE HOUSE

Atlanta, Ga., May 31.—Characterizing the former president as a bungler, Ex-Governor Frank Hanly of Indiana asserted that had Roosevelt held the presidency during the Mexican crisis and been backed by a powerful army and navy he would have devastated this country with war.

The remark was made during his debate here last night with Richmond Pearson Hobson on the question, Resolved that the United States Should Control the Seas. Representative Hobson had outlined his views of the necessity for equipping this country with such a naval force that war would henceforth be out of the question.

Governor Hanley declared this would mean danger internally as well as from the foreign nations with such a man as Roosevelt in the white house.

"The fighting man of the nations," he said, "who is now seeking the presidency again might have been in supreme power during the Mexican crisis. With a power like that in the hands of a man like that our country would have been devastated with war. His bungling hands would have tied knots in diplomacy which he would have tried to cut with his army and navy."

In speaking of the national political situation, Governor Hanley predicted that W. J. Bryan would get the democratic nomination.

WHAT THEY RESORT TO

Dull days in the newspaper offices bring curious stories.

Macon Ga. reports that an automobile driver found his machine without water and none in the community. The only thing he could do was to milk a cow nearby and fill up the radiator. That would have been bad enough as it was but when the trip was finished they found that a half pound of butter floated on top.

Now the automobile operator would like to know how that butter came to the top and how it was discovered and removed from the radiator. But that is not the ob of the automobile man. He has told the story and owing to the dull news of news the papers printed it.

LESSON TEXT

1. Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in Heaven.

2. Therefore when thou doest thine alms do not sound a trumpet before thee as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you They have their reward.

3. But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth.

4. That thine alms may be in secret and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward open ly.

5. And when thou prayest thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you They have their reward.

6. But thou when thou prayest enter into thy closet and when thou hast shut thy door pray to thy Father which is in secret and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

7. But when ye pray use not vain repetitions as the heathen do for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

8. Be not ye therefore like unto them for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him.

9. After this manner therefore pray ye. Our Father which art in heaven Hallowed be thy name.

10. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven.

11. Give us this day our daily bread.

12. And forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors.

13. And lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory, for ever. Amen.

14. For if ye forgive men their trespasses your heavenly Father will also forgive you.

15. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

16. Moreover when ye fast be not as the hypocrites of a sad countenance for they disfigure their faces that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you They have their reward.

17. But thou when thou fastest anoint thine head and wash thy face.

18. That thou appear not unto men to fast but unto thy Father which is in secret and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

COST OF SERVICE VS RAW FOOD

By Elbert Hubbard

Not long ago a certain club in [illegible] city in Chicago gave a dinner to its members.

They supplied a dinner for one hundred and fifty people at a cost of forty cents each.

They then took the bill of fare of a certain prominent hotel in Chicago and picked out exactly the same items that they had served [illegible] the price printed on the bill of fare the same items that they had [illegible] fourteen cents would have [illegible] dollars at the hotel.

There is no doubt but that [illegible] such food as [illegible] equally good.

The question is: what is the difference between the forty cent and [illegible] dollar.

[illegible] Wiley of Washington [illegible] grow [illegible] the proposition.

Then he dictated a letter.

In the first place fourteen cents included only the bare cost of the raw materials. The labor of preparing the food the cost of purchasing it, fuel, light, heat, rent and insurance were all omitted.

The preacher bought the raw food, the [illegible] cooked the [illegible] the table and the [illegible] washed the dishes.

There was no charge for service [illegible] of all [illegible]

[illegible] Wiley also [illegible] difference between eating your dinner in a church basement and in a beautiful and costly dining room where music and flowers and other charming accessories were provided.

All of which is very true.

There is no danger of starvation in this country as long as the principal cost of a meal is in the service provided and not in the food itself.

The raw materials it is true cost more now than ever before. But on the other hand we know more about cooking than ever before and thing go further now than they did twenty five years ago—this on account of our increased knowledge of dietetics and domestic science.

We have better housekeepers than the world has ever seen and there is less waste where things are done on the economic basis.

On the other hand if you want flowers flunkies music and other [illegible] without the close proximity of the [illegible] you will have to pay the piper. A sum equal to the actual value of your food you will have to pay the fellow who stand guard over your hat.

Not long ago I was talking with the steward of a circus. This was told us that he had daily fed a circus family of two hundred people and had taken care of a family of the same size for fourteen years.

The steward buys direct of the producers. He has acquaintanceship along the route and when he arrives in town there are certain farmers who bring him the things that he needs. He pays a little more than the market price and he demands [illegible] better [illegible] than the average. [illegible] must be fresh and fine and of the best quality.

And this circus steward tells me that a meal now costs him simply one cent more than it did ten years ago.

The high cost of living comes to a great degree from an increased cost of service.

In the olden time when the house keepers went to market with a basket there is no doubt but that they bought a deal closer than they do now. Now days we telephone our orders to a middleman or a clerk comes and takes them.

The war on the middleman has come to stay. Our Chicago friends at their church dinner did their own marketing. They prepared the food. They supplied the service.

The next thing instead of going to market and buying of the producer is for us each to have a garden and raise our own vegetables.

To perspire to the noble cause of agriculture is essentially beautiful and hygenic and makes for happiness and economy.

High prices are the most beneficient things that have come this way for many a moon. They have made us realize they have made us think and through this are making us get busy.

The average yield in America is going to be doubled and in the process mankind will take a big step to the front physically, mentally, morally and spiritually.

We grow by doing things.

Trials, difficulties dangers obstacles are all good for us provided we struggle and overcome them.

MACK IS MANAGER IN NAME AND IN FACT

Connie Mack, Leader of World's Champion Athletics

[illegible] world's champion Athletics [illegible] alone today in many respects. A [illegible] or it may be systems exist on [illegible] club which exists nowhere else [in th]e baseball world.

[Th]e Athletics are managed first last [and] all the time entirely by Connie [Mac]k. His power and authority ranks [abov]e that of any other man in a similar capacity in baseball.

[Tom] Shibe, vice president of the [club, g]ave a sample of the authority [vested] in the Athletic chieftain when [the] club was in New Orleans last [spring]. Tom was discussing the af[fairs] of the club and incidentally men[tion]ed that he didn't know the salary [of a] single player on the club.

One of the parties in the conversation looked surprised and said "Why surely then your father knows the salaries." His father Ben Shibe is president of the club.

"No, I am positive," Tom answered "that even my father doesn't know. Why a few years ago Connie went to father and said 'Mr Shibe so and so wants a raise in salary. What do you think?'

"Now Connie I don't want to have a thing to do with the matter. Do just as you want. That's entirely up to you. Anything you do will be completely satisfactory to me."

And Connie still does what he wants.

AROUND THE BASES

[K]id Elberfeld has been sold to Mil[wau]kee by the Washington club.

[J]oe Johnson has been named as [cap]tain of the New Orleans team.

[J]ack Nagle a catcher farmed by the [Cub]s to New Orleans has been sold [to] New Haven.

[A]rthur Fletcher, Larry Doyle and [Ch]ief Meyers are Giants lucky enough [to] get three year contracts.

Don't worry. It won't be long before Cincinnati fans will be saying that [Fra]nk O'Day is a good umpire.

[G]abe Hildebrand of the Cincinnati [Re]ds has been sent back to the Mon[trea]l team from which he came.

Shotten the Browns outfielder seems [to] be a much improved player this [sea]son and he was coming fast last [ye]ar.

[W]ild Conroy has been shifted to the [out]field by Manager Ganzel. It isn't [a] new position for Connie by any [me]ans.

Manager Davis of the Clevelands [wou]ld rather go to the Highlanders because [hi]s young catcher O'Neill looks like [a] wonder.

John M. Ward president of the Bos[ton] National league team has retired [fro]m the competitive field as an ama[te]ur golfer.

Pitchers Baker and Reis, Outfielder [W]hooley and Third Baseman Stott [ha]ve been sold to Erie by the St [Lo]uis Nationals.

Hugh Jennings is as frisky as ever [on] the coaching lines. Auto accidents [ca]nnot slacken nor train wrecks his [sti]le infinite variety.

Pitcher [illegible] dub [illegible] a Cardinal [illegible] [fa]ll and [illegible] to the Montgomery [S]outhern Association team this spring [is] pitching great ball.

Theodore Breitenstein veteran [s]outhpaw pitcher has been released [by] New Orleans so he could sign as [S]outhern league umpire.

Manager Frank has sent Pitchers [Ad]am Frost and Cheney and Outfield[er]s Dawson and Meixel to the New [Or]leans team of the Cotton States [L]eague.

Joe Agler first baseman has been [rel]eased by the Cubs to Jersey City [a]nd Pitcher Pierce obtained by waiver [f]rom the Giants has reported to Chance.

Ty Cobb started playing ball when he was thirteen years old. This is an awful blow to those people who are continually declaring 13 is an unlucky number.

Headline in a Baltimore paper reads "Allen Russell, brother of Lefty Russell goes to New York." This New York happens to be York, Pa. Quite a difference between the two cities.

GREATEST SLABMAN IN GAME

In All Elements of Pitching Walter Johnson, the "Idaho Cyclone" Entitled to Decision

Discussions break out frequently as to the greatest slabman in the game today. But at the wind up of each argument no one seems able to compile a choice with any edge on Johnson the Idaho cyclone. If a vote were taken among the profession there [illegible] any doubt but that Washington's premier would stampede the [illegible] get the nomination of [illegible]

There are others who [illegible] him at various [illegible] knows more about the art of [pit]ching—Ed Walsh can send his [illegible] [Thr]ee-fingered Brown [illegible] a better curved ball and Rube Marquard shoots almost as much smoke. [illegible] combined elements of pitching great[ness] the smoke ball Swede is probably entitled to the decision. He won 2[illegible] games with a team in seventh place last season after facing a bad start due to poor condition. There were only five slabmen in his league who did as well and the other four were all with clubs pitched [illegible] much loftier altitude in the race.

The crisis came, his life was despaired of. The little nurse boldly took it upon herself to send a line to Margery Sessoms. She had gotten her name from the sick man's ravings, she found her address in the telephone book. But alas! Margery was a thousand miles from New York. She was down south in Georgia nursing her mother back to health—and trying to patch up her own broken heart with her art.

It was a month later that returning to her northern home, Margery found the letter addressed in a strange woman's handwriting. They had carelessly neglected to forward it, and as Margery's stupefied senses at last took in the full realization of the words she gave a little husky cry and—swooned. They brought her to in a little while and she again took up the letter and slowly re-read the contents.

"Dear Miss Sessoms—If you can please come to the hospital right away. I am writing you on my own responsibility. Poor young Dr Ogden is dying and he talks about you all the time—some trouble between you—and I know you'd come if you could hear him.

"Ask for Miss Trueheart when you get to the hospital. Hastily,

"LYDIA T."

But Dwight Ogden did not die after all. He came slowly back to health and strength—and a shattered life. He had been so near relief from it all, and relief had not come. The same bleak future stretched before him only if possible it was bleaker. The little nurse had told him of her letter to Margery — and Margery's failure to respond. What was there left for him to live for? Not even hope!

* * * * * * *

Margery's trembling hand sought her throat! she felt as if she were going to stifle. Her heart plunged downward a thousand leagues. Dwight dead—and she had not been able to go to him. He had died believing her cruel and unforgiving and relentless! When she could pull herself together she arose and dragged her aching limbs to the telephone. She called up the hospital and asked for Miss Trueheart. Miss Trueheart was "on duty" and she falteringly inquired of the girl at the phone when Dr Ogden had died.

"Oh!" she gasped "not—not dead. Getting well—ah! Thank you so much, I was misinformed. Goodby." Margery never knew how she got out the words—or how she got back to her room. The first thing of which she was conscious was of sitting before her desk pen in hand.

"Dear Dwight

"I have just returned from Macon Ga., after a six weeks visit. On my arrival at the house I found a letter from the girl who nursed you, Miss Trueheart telling me of your serious illness. It was written the day you were expected to die and she asked me to come. You understand now why I did not.

"Dear can you ever forgive me? I have been narrow prejudiced mean. But I have suffered. You don't know the price I've paid. Dwight—all these wretched weeks and today when I thought I had lost you.

"There's nothing I can write nothing I can say to excuse myself. And I'm not going to try. After the way I acted and talked that last night of course you could never ask me to marry you again. But—but it is leap year dear and I am going to ask you. My people are getting ready to sail for Paris in ten days. I can be ready for the other—in a week. As in the old days.

"Margery

"P. S.—After all we are only second cousins."

ASKED AUTOGRAPH AND GOT IT

Few Lines Above Signature However Made the Souvenir Rather a Costly One

A favorite amusement of society in Victorian days says Lady Dorothy Nevill was the bazar. Many great ladies became expert in the art of wheedling visitors into paying generous sums for useless articles. However the victim of brigandage named by Lady Dorothy—in Under Five Reigns—himself invited disaster and was besides quite able to afford it.

One of the most ingenious stratagems ever employed at a bazar was probably that devised by the famous writer George Sand when holding a stall at a charitable sale in favor of distressed Poles.

Baron James de Rothschild happening to pass the fair saleswoman addressed him with the usual request to purchase something.

"What can I buy?" asked the baron. "You have nothing that I can do anything with. But stay, an idea strikes me. Give me your autograph. Sell me that."

Mme Sand promptly took a sheet of paper and wrote "Received from Baron James de Rothschild the sum of 1,000 francs for the benefit of the distressed Poles. George Sand."

M de Rothschild read it, thanked her and presenting a note for the sum mentioned passed on with the autograph.—Youth's Companion.

At His Word

"I was talking with a casual acquaintance I met on a car going home the other evening and I happened to remark that I did like some touch and go about a man when——"

"When what?"

"He grabbed my watch and jumped off the platform in a twinkling!"

HERBERT SANDERS

"IN SELECTING A PIANO FOR MY DAUGHTER

I took both time and pains, feeling that only an instrument of the highest musical qualities could start her right in her musical career. After a thorough comparison I selected the Emerson. I found that the Emerson was conceded to be in the very front rank of musical excellence; that its tone was considered marvelous alike by artist and amateur; and that the action was elastic and responsive. To have withstood the test of over 60 years it must have that inherent quality of design, material and workmanship that shows itself in great durability."

Surely the verdict of those who know the Emerson through long association should decide you in its favor.

The Delinquent Rabbit

Whay said last year when Easter was, an' me an' brother John
Got lots o' eggs with names an' lots o' little pictures on
That rabbits laid the Easter eggs an' pa he showed me where
Th' paper had a picture of th' rabbit fixed, an' there
Was colored eggs all roundabout, an' rabbits hoppin' round
As if they's glad their Easter eggs by little boys was found

An' so I got a bunny now! I had it for a week
An' it ain't cackled none at all although I go an' peek
Inside its little house an' look if I can find some eggs
But it just sits up when I come an' begs an' begs an' begs
For lettuce leaf an' cabbage leaf an' shivers with its nose
I wonder if a rabbit flaps its wings same when it crows!

Was tryin' to encourage it I've give it lots o' straw—
But it don't build a nest at all it wants to sit an' gnaw
Cabbage leaves an' hop around an' scare at dogs an' cats
An' turn an' jump a foot or two when I look through th' slats
An' when it's night th' rabbit won't get up there on th' roost
An' doesn't like it when I try to help it with a boost

I've showed it pictures like I want put on my Easter eggs—
I guess it understands me 'cause it took them with its legs
In front, an' held them up an' tried to eat them too
Then let them drop an' looked at me as if to say it knew
Just what I meant—but still it's mighty queer
It hasn't laid an egg at all an' Easter's nearly here

It just sets round an' spends its time a wigglin' its ears
An' jumpin' sidewise, frightlike, at each little sound it hears
I got some corn an' stuff like chickens eat an' throwed it in
An' told my rabbit that it's time egg layin' should begin
I got a nice big nest egg an' I've put it in th' nest
An' told my rabbit to sail in an' do its level best

Polar Privations

Mr Amundsen tells of his winter quarters in the antarctic regions having been equipped with a plain bath and a steam bath. It is evident that hunting poles isn't much more trouble nowadays than going riding on one of the fast trains.

We do hope that Amundsen had in his party one of those people who are always telling about taking their cold plunge every morning. It would reconcile us to climbing over ice mountains, eating pemmican and things like that just to hear him object to any one wanting a steam bath with the temperature at the nice, stimulating point of 140 below.

Some wonder having been expressed at Amundsen's reaching the pole so quickly, we hasten to point out that as there are no Eskimo in the antarctic regions he did not have to carry a car load of gumdrops.

Among other questions his records are expected to settle is the vexing one of whether it is "antarctic" or "antartic."

Papa's Deductions

"I believe our baby is intoxicated," remarked the proud papa.

"Why, what do you mean?" demanded the fond mamma.

"He seems to be full of high bawls," explained the proud papa, whose knowledge of acoustics was thus shown to be equal to his information as to intoxicants.

CREDIT ALL TO BLACK CAT

Partners and Employes of New York Real Estate Firm Have Joined Ranks of Believers

Never say there is no luck in a black cat. For months a well known real estate firm in the Fifth avenue region had been doing just a rent paying business. Then one day a gaunt, ribshowing, dejected black cat sneaked into the office [illegible] his hope and broke [illegible].

"Kitty, kitty," said the junior partner. [illegible] Tom came in. The junior partner sent the office boy to the nearest restaurant to get a saucer of milk. That night Tom curled up on the [illegible] and next day the firm made a $10,000 [illegible].

"[illegible] accident," said the firm's most expensive salesman. "Rot! It's [illegible] superstition. Here, Kitty."

By his own Tom's tremendous affections with [illegible] and honeyed words it got so that he couldn't come in the office without Tom sharpening his claws on the legs of his new $70 suit. But the high priced salesman didn't complain. He got his reward, for after a time he made the best sale he'd turned off in a year. The managing partner lined his waste basket with silk and carelessly threw catnip under his desk, and in other fashions shamelessly catered to the sensual appetites of that stray feline. Tom began to observe him on a Monday. Before Saturday of that week the managing partner had sold a summer hotel, which had been a drug on the market for two years. Apart from these sales the general business of the office increased largely from the day of Tom's entrance.

"I've heard that cats would kill a cat," said the managing partner. "But say, is there any danger to dear old Tom if we overfeed him?"—Cincinnati Times Star.

HEARD ONLY CALL OF DUTY

Brave Irish Physician Scorned Danger When Welfare of Patient Was at Stake

The talk of how Dr O'Brien of Innistoure braved the Atlantic storm to help a sick patient has made all western Ireland ring with his praises.

He received a wire that his services were urgently needed on the island of Innismann, but the storm was raging so fiercely that he had difficulty in finding a crew willing to put to sea. At last he succeeded and the corragh—a small canvas boat—started on its four and a half mile journey through the surging waters that ran with terrific force between Innismore and Innismann.

It was a life and death battle all the way, half the men striving to keep the boat headed across the straits while the rest bailed out the water that was continually shipped. At length Innismann was reached, the patient's life was saved and the return journey begun.

By that time a regular hurricane was blowing and several times the doctor and his crew seemed on the point of death when they happened upon some trawlers at anchor, with which they sheltered till a lull in the tempest enabled them to make a dash for the shore.

Something Hubby Didn't Know.

Miss Elsie de Wolfe, "America's best dressed woman," was talking about the draped skirts of the new fashions.

"I heard an Easter anecdote the other day about these new skirts," she said.

"A young wife, at the Marlborough-Blenheim at Atlantic City, appeared before her husband in a draped suit of cream colored cloth ready for the boardwalk's Easter parade.

"'How do I look, George?' she said.

"'Fine.'

"'But tell me, George, does my skirt hang even all around?'

"'Yes,' said George, after a close look. 'Yes, quite even.'

"'Oh, dear!' said she, then I'll have to go upstairs again. These new draped skirts, you know, don't hang right if they hang even.'"

Woman Doctors in Siberia

A number of influential Siberians are petitioning the Ministry of Education in St Petersburg to allow women to be admitted to the medical faculty in the University of Tobolsk. The petitioners point out that there is a wide field for women doctors in Siberia, where it is often difficult for settlers to get medical aid.

There are many Mohammedans in the country, and it is explained that only women doctors can come to their help in illness as they do not permit men to see their wives and daughters. MRS. McGILL BROKE DOWN

Gives the Real Facts In Regard to Her Case and Tells How She Suffered.

Jonesboro Ark —"I suffered a complete break down in health some time ago writes Mrs A. McGill from this place I was very weak and could not do any work I tried different remedies but they did me no good

One day I got a bottle of Cardui It did me so much good I was surprised, and took some more

Before I took Cardui I had headache and backache and sometimes I would cry for hours Now I am over all that and can do all kinds of housework I think it is the greatest medicine on earth

In the past fifty years thousands of ladies have written like Mrs McGill to tell of the benefit received from Cardui

Such testimony from earnest women surely indicates the great value of this tonic remedy for diseases peculiar to women Are you a sufferer? Yes? Cardui is the medicine you need. We urge you to try it.

The ONLOOKER
By WILBUR D. NESBIT

Good Mistress Brown a patient wife
Lived in an air of constant strife—
No cook she got could be induced to stay
She yielded to each stern demand
Gave favors with a lavish hand
And granted each request for double pay

She followed all the helpful rules
Laid down by the housekeeping schools
Each cook was treated as though she were kin
Each had her choice of hat or dress
That Mistress Brown [illegible] to possess
Each had more days out than she was in

The parlor should the cook desire

The Claws of Mooneye

By Jane Gahan

(Copyright [illegible] Associated Literary Press)

Pickold [illegible] internal [illegible] Mooneye [illegible] Yellow Puffs through her wrist.

He [illegible] watching [illegible]. Four oil torches [illegible] the darkness of the tent. [illegible] the benches were blurred and [illegible] less. For [illegible] the whole place was held in a spell of silence, waiting for the Indian girl to do her famous trick. She was [illegible] with a revolver backward over her shoulder, at a card held by Yellow Puffs, taking aim from a hand mirror.

The girl did not shriek when the bullet struck her wrist. She looked at the face of the other and smiled, white lipped.

The band started to play at a warning from Pete's megaphone. Then [illegible] another act to cover the accident.

"I'm [illegible] girl," he gasped huskily, bending over the shattered wrist. "The [illegible]! She's never missed that shot."

Mooneye stood near watching them with unblinking eyes brown and soft as sealskin.

"It's all right. Maybe she didn't mean to. Get a doctor, will you, Pete. I need that wrist."

She drew it back quickly. Pete had stooped and kissed her with

"Say, you ain't got any heart at all, have you?" he demanded.

Puffs looked at the figure of the Indian girl just visible in the tent entrance.

"You're singing the wrong bell, Pete," [illegible] said slowly. "Why don't you take notice of that little Indian kid yonder?"

"Who, Mooneye? Why?"

"Don't you know?" She smiled up in his face. "I do."

Pete was silent, but bewildered. Therefore he swore vaguely to himself, and went back to the ring after seeing the girl cared for.

"Don't, Mooneye's Watching You."

He didn't know what she meant. He had never noticed Mooneye [illegible] until that night [illegible] Puffs had also escaped notice. Standing back at the side of the ring, with his megaphone held in readiness to announce the acts, [illegible] his darling and knew he was in love with Puffs.

When [illegible] a working member of [illegible] show, he [illegible] just as if he were a New York [illegible] a token of [illegible] interest, a professional accolade.

Mingle Mooneye had been named the first [illegible] a bunch of [illegible] Indians straggled into the [illegible]. She was the last in the procession. They were not fresh from the far West, these red brothers and sisters. For years they had upheld the pathetic and thrilling traditions of a vanishing race according to the barkers in little one ring western shows. They [illegible] whooped, howled and kept the passing race from becoming extinct.

Mooneye was a half breed. She carried a couple of suit cases and walked lightly in her heeled boots. She was [illegible] with dusky [illegible] brown eyes wide, child like, with [illegible] tantalizing uplift at the corners [illegible] dark hair was bound about her head in close braids. As she passed, a lanky, grinning cowboy threw out her name to her.

"Hello there, Mooneye. Step high!"

So [illegible] Yellow Puffs. To be exact, she was a lady cowboy. That was what the female portion of the audience called her.

She was not tall, neither was she [illegible] Her [illegible] were keen and merry [illegible] as one who [illegible] long distances. Close [illegible] showed them to be rather [illegible] Her chin was one no man [illegible] have been ashamed of, likewise [illegible] jaw [illegible]. Most women do not [illegible] for an apparent jaw line. Yellow Puffs accentuated hers by a persistently good natured outlook on life with a dash of the aggressive when any one tried, as she said, to put one over on her.

After she returned to the show even

[illegible] to see that she had committed a fatal error. [illegible]

[illegible]

Pete's girl [illegible] till the season [illegible] he said [illegible] You are the star [illegible] you [illegible] show and play white [illegible] you?

Puffs [illegible] put it behind her and laughed shortly. They stood in the shadow of the [illegible] canvas entrance. Beyond were the small tents set in the darkness. The nearest one was Mooneye's. Pete's pulses began to tap [illegible] the same old tune that [illegible] taught Childe Cupid to hop to some time back. He bent over and kissed the girl's cheek. She swerved so he could not reach her lips.

"Don't — Mooneye's watching you," she said curtly. "I don't trespass on anybody else's brand."

"There's no brand on me," sent back Pete hotly, then he, too, turned and saw the Indian standing motionless near, and he ceased thrilling. There was the touch of claws on his [illegible].

[illegible] look at his eyes, Pete," said Puffs. "They give you away."

Pete hesitated helpless, blundering, dogged, between the two of them. [illegible] he went into the ring.

Puffs waited for her turn. The pony she always rode was dancing restlessly under check. In the ring Pete was doing his star act, as Pie-bald Pete from Wind Valley, dead shot scout and terror of the redskins. Now they had turned the steers and the Indians into the ring for the grand roundup and fight. After that came Puffs' riding turn.

Suddenly the Indian disappeared. There came the last volley of shot and the thud of hoofs as the boys chased the steers. Puffs backed her pony to let them pass through the narrow passage, but as the first head appeared Mooneye rose from the shadows waving a lighted torch under its nostrils.

The rearing dancing pony was in the way. Puffs tried to hold it steady as the frightened steer lowered its head and backed into the mass behind him. Mooneye had tossed the torch madly at their jammed heads and was yelling something. The foremost steers tried to turn and were trampled by those behind. A roar rose from the seats at the smell of smoke.

"Get back there," Puffs shouted to the Indian. "You'll be killed."

She pressed the sides of the pony lightly and it sprang forward, shoulder against the flank of the steer.

"Come on, boys, chase them now!" she called back, and the mass broke as the leader ran headlong, Puffs at his heels.

"Is Mooneye hurt?" was her first question, after the danger was past and Pete found her.

"Is she hurt?" he repeated grimly. "I should say not. You'd have been gored and trampled if she'd had her way. She leaves tomorrow."

Puffs looked up at his eyes.

"Why? Let me go. She's more to the show than I am."

"But she [illegible] more to me. Oh, I mean it." [illegible] reached for her hungrily. "I've let you go along easy, girl, and almost lost you letting you have your own way. You sure had me eating out of your hand tamely, didn't you? Here I [illegible] along on tiptoes, respecting [illegible] ladies and getting clawed [illegible] and left. It ends right here tonight, Puffs. Mooneye's packing her army blanket this minute. We'll get married tomorrow and maybe skip the show business. What do you say? I can get a foreman's position anywhere west of Joplin and you won't have to lope around any sawdust ring. [illegible] dear?"

Puffs put her arms up around his neck. Out in the ring they were putting out the lights.

"I'll go, Pete," she whispered.

The Dean's Lesson

Jonathan Swift, the Dean Swift so well known to fame, dearly loved a joke and constantly inflicted them on his friends and servants. Sometimes they were kindly enough and sometimes quite the reverse. In "Mathe[illegible] Lady Gifford," Julia G. Longe gives an amusing example of the former kind.

Once when the dean was traveling in Ireland he found himself obliged to stay the night at a wayside inn. In the morning when his servant brought him his boots he saw that they had not been cleaned. He asked why.

"I thought, sir, as you were going to ride, that they would soon be dirty again."

"Oh!" said his master. "Very well, go and see to the horses." The man obeyed, and in the meantime the dean ordered the landlord not to give him any breakfast. When the man returned his master told him to bring the horses round.

"But, sir," remonstrated the man, "I have not yet had my breakfast."

"Oh, that is no matter," replied the dean cheerfully. "We will start our journey, for it is certain that if you were to have your breakfast you would soon be hungry again."

He took him breakfastless and we may suppose that he never after neglected to clean his master's boots when on a journey.—Youth's Companion.

The Wayfarer

By Callie S. Collins

(Copyright by Associated Literary Press.)

Cecily was born for romance She was beautiful that smacked of the Renaissance. Hence when she saw Esmond for the first time she found herself madly in love with him.

He was an artist with a leaning to illustration. He set up his easel one April day on the edge of a grassy field and proceeded to make a sketch of Cecily's father.

Mr. Drake resented not only the presence of having himself put in the picture—but in being put in one where he was not dressed in his Sunday best. He he told Bruce Esmond to get elsewhere for his inspiration.

But Cecily interfered. Because her father he paints such lovely things, she said just look at those cows.

Esmond grudgingly admitted that Remus and Romulus looked well and promised on a sketch in which he would be left out.

Then he put in the field and the cows and the horses, he stated generously "but not me."

Then he went on plowing and Cecily and Bruce Esmond proceeded to get acquainted.

Esmond said the conventional thing—that Cecily was too pretty to be buried in the country that he was surfeited of city women with their feather hats and furbelows that Cecily seemed fresh and pleased him—all the fascinating compliments that men of his type use to turn the heads of the unsophisticated.

Then, Cecily believed herself madly in love with him and if it had not been for the Wayfarer she would either have married Bruce to live unhappily ever after or she would not have married him and would have felt her self broken hearted.

The Wayfarer came slouching along the road in old clothes with a fishing pole slung over his shoulder and a pail in his hand. He did not compliment Cecily at all. He simply asked for a glass of water and sat on the grass bench and drank it. He looked very tired and Cecily invited him in. "When father comes home we'll have supper" she said and he is always glad to have company.

The Wayfarer thanked her and for the first time he smiled.

Cecily liked his smile. It lighted up his tired face and seemed to warm the observer.

Cecily sat by him on the stone bench and chatted of many things. She talked most of Bruce Esmond. You've heard of him of course."

"Yes. He has a promising career before him."

"Oh, I hope so" said Cecily, as dutifully.

The Wayfarer said nothing.

"How long has he been here?" he asked, at last.

"A month" said happy Cecily "and he's going to stay another month. He wants to get the light of the May moon on the apple blossoms."

"Humph!" said the Wayfarer.

Mr. Drake was very enthusiastic about the Wayfarer that night.

"He wants to board here through the fishing season" said the farmer to Cecily. "I don't know but we might as well let him."

"Of course" said Cecily. But when she told Esmond he raged.

"How can I have any inspiration with him around? I want only you, Cecily."

"But you see father needs the money" said Cecily gravely. "There's the interest on the mortgages to be met."

Esmond looked at her keenly. "I thought your father owned the farm" he said.

"He does. But there's one mortgage. And times are bad and the crops have failed."

Two weeks later the Wayfarer coming up from the stream stopped before Esmond's easel. There are just two things you should try to do" he said, quietly "you shouldn't try to paint sunlight on that silver pool, or to make love to a girl like Cecily."

Esmond turned an angry face up to him. "What have you to say about it?" he queried.

"Something said the Wayfarer, quietly. I know your reputation in town Esmond—and Cecily is too sweet to be hurt by you."

"In love with her yourself?" demanded Esmond.

Perhaps. But that has nothing to do with the case. You'd better pack up your pictures and run along home."

"I'll take Cecily with me" said the other.

"I think not" said the Wayfarer "because when Cecily learns the truth I don't think she will want to go."

"It's a pretty small thing for one man to tell about another."

"Not when the other is using the hospitality of a girl's father to accomplish his own ends. I shall tell Drake what I know of your past. He can decide whether it is necessary to warn Cecily. Personally I don't believe that Cecily will miss you after you have been away a week. When she really falls in love she will fall in love with a man."

"I like you."

"At least I can offer clean hands and true and steadfast affection."

The next day the artist went to town.

After his departure Cecily drooped and faded.

Can it be that she really loved him?" the Wayfarer often asked himself.

He tried in every way to make her happy.

"I'm an old fellow" he said "but really I know some interesting things."

Cecily began to enjoy the walks with him. He did not talk to her as Bruce Esmond did—of the beauty of her eyes and the charm of her smile. But he had a way of telling her things that were delightful and as time went on Cecily began to feel that she was in close communion with a wonderful heart and mind.

"You don't paint your pictures" she said one day timidly. "You tell them."

Such a sweet comradeship as it grew to be! The Wayfarer went to town now and then for books and once there was a box of candy and at another time a wonderful bunch of violets.

"How extravagant!" said Cecily, sniffing the flowers with delight.

"But you like them" said the Wayfarer.

One day Bruce Esmond came back.

"I have a perfect right to come" he said to the Wayfarer "I am free."

"Legally?" was the question.

"A divorce" said Esmond. "Now I shall marry Cecily."

The anger of the Wayfarer burst out. "You shall not have her" he said. "You will break her heart as you have broken the hearts of other women who have trusted you—you shall not have her."

And just then some one said behind them. "Are you talking about me?" Cecily stood there, looking at them with grave eyes.

It was Esmond who answered her. He said "I shall not marry you" he said "and probably you think I cheated you badly because I wooed you before I was free. But I loved you as much Cecily. And he—he has nothing but his money."

Cecily looked up at the Wayfarer. "Does he mean—that—that you are rich?" she asked.

"Yes" said the Wayfarer.

But you came tramping along the road like any common traveler."

"Because I was tired of the things that riches could bring. I wanted other things—like love—Cecily."

And so they stood before her these two men asking pleading for her favor.

Cecily sobbed with her face in her hands.

"Go away" she said "go away both of you."

But as the Wayfarer went slowly she cried after him. "Oh I shall miss our long walks together and the books."

He turned back. "Why should my money stand in the way?"

"You deceived me" she said "and—and if I should say yes now you might think it was because I wanted to be rich."

"I should think it was because you loved me" he said.

From the other side of the hedge Bruce spoke bitterly. "It's always wealth that wins."

But Cecily smiled at him. "He has taught me something that you will never know, she said "I ask only that we shall be good comrades along the road—wayfarers together—until death parts."

John M Callahan's Story

John M Callahan told a story of a friend who had been asked to make a short address on the tariff in Manitowoc.

It was eight o'clock when he began his speech and he slowly unfolded the intricacies of the wool schedule the steel rate and a few others never noticing the time. At 11 30 he hesitated for a few moments and said:

"I have made my remarks rather short and perhaps some of you do not fully understand this important subject and wish to ask me a few questions. I will be glad to answer anything you may ask me."

For some minutes none spoke and again he asked for questions. Finally an old Irishman in the rear of the hall arose.

"And wud yez be after tellin me somethin?" he asked.

"Surely" said my friend "what is it you want to know?"

"Well" said he "if ye don't mind what time is it? —Milwaukee Free Press.

REPORTER IS A HISTORIAN

No Other Is So True and Few Are So Entertaining and So Useful.

A police reporter indeed (or a penny liner as he is sometimes with too much levity styled) is the truest historian of his age. And as no other histories are half so true so few are nearly so entertaining or so useful either as those which he indites these only have we the manners of the time caught living as they rise—served up as it were piping hot—and human nature naturally delineated everywhere else it is dressed up varnished over idealized perhaps or otherwise so metamorphosed or mystified as hardly to be recognized for the same thing that one is accustomed to see and have to do with in its original condition of flesh and blood. Nay your penny dreadful is not the greatest of historians merely but the most penetrating of philosophers going to the root of the matter and the most instructive of poets and dramatists not only high actions and high passions best describing but low ones quite as well. All this he is by reason of the matter of fact spirit in which he works.

For this is his distinction that (to the shame of literature it must be confessed) he is the only description of man of letters who is not in some sort as much a systematic liar. All other writers set themselves to embellish elevate refine truth and Nature—some have gone the length of maintaining that this falsification this lying is the very soul and indispensable essence of the poetical in all its forms. He alone takes down and communicates what he hears and sees promptly as he hears and sees it—unmixed the faithless faithful mirror he.

THIEVES OF PARIS CAUGHT

Extraordinary Collection of Stolen Property Found in Their Camp in a Suburb

The Paris police force made a remarkable haul at the suburb of Montreuil sous Bois. Eighteen men were arrested and an enormous heterogeneous stock of stolen property was seized. The seizure was made in a camp of hastily constructed houses which was divided between two gangs of thieves and apaches. Most of the members belonged to the chief band, commonly known as Boers" owing to their houses being known as Transvaal City.'

Inquiries made by the police showed that every Sunday morning the inhabitants of "Transvaal City" sold stolen meat at 4d a pound and organized penny lotteries with prizes such as clocks, stolen watches, bicycles and stores of preserved provisions. The police seized a quantity of harness, saddlery, bicycles sewing machines typewriters, mattresses and bedding, and in a newly plastered ceiling they unearthed jewelry and watches enough to stock two or three jewelers' shops.

The information on which the police acted was given by a poor woman who had been kept in bondage by the thieves in order to do their cooking for them. Every one of them could steal with both audacity and cunning but not one could as much as cook a potato.

Latest in Newspapers

The animated newspaper issued by a French firm for display in moving picture establishments is said to be the most costly newspaper issued from the standpoint of the subscriber as one of these reels costs many dollars. These films are very popular with a certain class of patrons of the movies. They are edited in much the same manner as the typical newspaper. A corps of operators is kept ready and the editor is in constant touch with many sources of news. As soon as a promising clip reaches him the editor sends one two or as many men as he thinks necessary for the purpose. Frequently the three films are patched together to make one complete reel. Correspondents are maintained at different points and these are assigned by telegraph to go to certain points where their services may be needed. Mine explosions and railroad accidents are regarded as particularly attractive features and men are sent at once to these whenever they are reasonably accessible. Pictures of the debris and the work of removal are always objects of interest to patrons of the movies.

Catch Smelt by the Wagonload

A great run of smelt is now going up the Sandy river the first one in about eight years. The little fish are to be seen in a solid column coming from the Columbia river.

Hundreds of persons attracted by the sight are catching the smelt in dip nets and buckets and hauling them away by the wagonload. Farmers are coming in by the score every day from every direction and from long distances to get a supply of fish for pickling and smoking.

The run probably will last for several days and then the season for the smelt will close until next winter.—Troutdale correspondence San Francisco Chronicle.

The Swinging Electric Breeze

Why sigh for the breeze
That wavering blows
Thro' the trees and leafy glades?
We'll give you the breeze
That steadily flows
From the thrust of whirling blades

Pay dear if you will
And seek where you can
For breeze worth a prince's dower;
We'll give you your fill
From a 'lectric fan
At less than a-cent an-hour.

Come in and enjoy the swinging breeze of the celebrated G-E 8 inch oscillating fan.

Rice Omelet With Cheese Sauce.

One cup of hot boiled rice, two eggs, half a teaspoon of salt, a little pepepr, one tablespoon of water, one tablespoon of butter. Separate yokes and whites. Beat yokes until thick and add rice, salt, pepepr and water. Mix well, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Melt butter in omelet pan, turn in the mixture and cook as puff omelet until firm. Before turning from pan spread one half with a layer of cheese sauce, then fold the other half over and turn omelet onto a hot platter. Pour remaining sauce around omelet and serve at once.

Cheese Sauce—Two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of flour, one quarter teaspoon salt, one quarter pepper, one cup milk, one half cup grated cheese. Prepare white sauce and when ready to serve add grated cheese without boiling, until cheese is melted.

Housecleaning Hints

To clean piano keys moisten a soft cloth ... apply it first ... then in silver whiting, and rub briskly on the ivory.

White paint is cleaned satisfactorily by rubbing it with a cloth dipped in hot water, then in a saucer of bran. The bran acts as a soap, does not injure the paint and restores the gloss.

Remove verdigris from metal by polishing it with a soft cloth dipped in ammonia.

Kentucky Ham

Cut ... of one half inch thick from the thick side of a country cured ham. Dredge with flour and pepper both sides ... the slices so they will not touch. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven. Pour off half the drippings, to this add four tablespoons of sweet cream and one of coffee. Let boil up, pour over the slices of ham after they are arranged on the platter. Serve hot.

Delicious Egg Biscuits

One heaping cup of sugar, a pinch of salt, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder carefully sifted twice, one small rounding tablespoonful of lard, mix lightly. Put one egg in a cup and beat until light, add milk until three quarters full, pour in and stir until smooth, then put on board and roll out like other biscuit. Be sure and try this.

POINTERS ON COOKING FISH

Smelts Need Especial Preparation to Get the Best Results—Giving Proper Taste to "Sole"

One of the most satisfactory ways to make smelts both tasty and attractive is to split the fish up the back, take out the bone, remove the eyes or else cut off the heads and then form each fish into a ring, fastening the head and tail together with a toothpick. Dip the fish into milk and then into fresh bread crumbs and fry in deep fat. Remove the toothpicks before serving, and arrange the fish around a mound of potato.

Broiled smelts with maitre d'hotel sauce seasoned with a little nutmeg as well as the usual lemon juice and parsley are delicious. Prepare the fish as for frying—they should be of good size—dip each into melted butter, then roll in bread crumbs, arrange on a fine wire broiler and cook over the fire, first one side and then the other.

If fillets of flounders, commonly known as sole, are left to lie in salt, parsley, thyme, a sliced onion and lemon juice for half an hour before frying they will take on a flavor much as the French chef gives them. They are best fried in deep fat.

FOR HANDLING DELICATE LACE

Electric Ironing Roller That Is Guaranteed Not to Injure Even the Finest Fabrics

An electrically heated ironing roller designed especially for pressing out laces and other delicate fabrics is here illustrated. The heating elements are contained within the highly polished steel roller and the current is switched on or off by turning the handle. A roller is much superior to the ordinary flatiron in pressing laces, as there is no danger of the former catching and tearing the lace.—Popular Mechanics.

The ONLOOKER

By WILBUR D. NESBIT

SPRING is HERE

I know that it is spring, though I hear no robin sing,
Though I see no jeweled flashing of the blue bird on the wing;
I know that spring is here, though no laughing leaves appear,
Though the snowflakes scurry swiftly through the chilly atmosphere.

Yet still 'tis spring, I know, though no dandelions blow,
And the meadows still are sleeping 'neath their covering of snow;
I even know 'tis spring though no poets rise and sing
In a Hoosier dialectic roundelay made of Bejing.

No balmy southern breeze brings the humming of the bees,
And no marvel-sweep of blossoms bursts upon the apple trees,
Yet I know that spring has come, though the frogs are sleeping dumb
And the fingers that would play upon the pipes of Pan are numb.

But this symptom never fails—every spring one's eye it hails—
So I'll sing 'tis spring although we're swept by fierce arctic gales;
Spring is with us, spring is here, in the daily prints appear
Many wild prophetic statements that a miner's strike is near.

Card of Thanks.

Our congressman has favored us with a package of nasturtium seeds, two packages of sweet peas and an assortment of beans, corn, and pumpkin seeds for which we are duly and truly thankful. We can use the beans and perhaps the corn will stew up all right.

We may have at times said things about congress which indicated somewhat of a rancorous disposition, but these things were expressed on the spur of the moment. There have been times when we asked for quick action on the higher cost of living and got a public document on "The Approximate Result of Permitting the Use of Three Per Cent Grades in the Road bed of the Panama Canal," and on these occasions we have overlooked the compliment to our literary taste and harped upon our imagined grievances. Let bygones be bygones.

If our congressman will hustle along a few samples of anthracite coal and some individual packages of coffee, not to mention early spring chickens, we shall be as patriotic as the next man. But our gardening and agricultural pursuits consist mainly of reading seed catalogues and believing folks who say they are selling us fresh eggs and country butter.

Hysterically Historical

"I observe that in your historical novel the heroine weeps almost continually," remarked the Astute Publisher to the Eminent Author.

"Yes," responded the Eminent Author, "you see the times described in the story were days of stress and peril."

"Well," said the Astute Publisher, "don't you think it would be more fitting to call it a hysterical novel?"

A New Excuse

"You never loved me," exclaimed the bride of a week.

"True, I did not," answered the brutal bridegroom with a sneer as he wrote an order for the expressman to come for her baggage.

"Then why did you marry me?" she moaned, gazing tearfully into the mirror to see if her hat was straight.

"I did it," he answered hoarsely, "to pay an election bet."

Evidence of Sagacity

"Would you rather be wise or beautiful?" asked Fate of the Coy Young Maiden.

"Beautiful," replied the damsel.

"Ah, you are wise already," commented Fate, as she tied up a package of cosmetics.

A Leap Year Plunge

By Nellie Cravey Gillmore

Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.

Little Margery Stevens's eyes were more pink than blue as she dabbed them petulantly with a very moist scrap of cambric and lifted her small determined chin with a sudden accession of pride. Her mind was made up; she had shed her last tear for him. And in order to convince herself that she meant what she said she opened Dwight Ogden's voluminous letter and read it through to the very end without so much as the quiver of an eyelash. Her lips tightened as she came to the final paragraph.

"I am sure the day will come when you will regret your obstinate course. You have vowed a thousand times that you loved me—not alone with your lips but with your eyes—which is more. I know it; you know it. We both understand fully that there can never be any other man or any other woman in just the same way. Our love was a sacred thing. It stands in a place by itself, high above the everyday counterfeit that people feed themselves—and fool—themselves on.

"We've proved it, haven't we? I am saying all this to you in self justification, in justice to yourself. In after years it will be something to look back upon—as an exoneration—should my silly conscience begin to prod me for what I've never intentionally done. But of course after your merciless words of Tuesday night it would be foolhardy—ridiculous of me—to reopen the subject to you. I have been given to understand. And as long as I live I shall never again annoy you with my feelings. I have asked you to marry me for the last time."

Margery folded the letter and placed it calmly in the envelope. Then she leaned forward in her chair and coolly laid it on the bed of pink and gray coals smoldering in the grate. She watched it in Spartan silence as the flame licked up and gathered it hungrily beneath its yellow tongue. When the last bit of charred paper had sifted to nothingness she arose, poked the coals with an elaborate display of unconcern and, weakly trilling a bar from an old opera, quitted the room and ran upstairs to her den. Her lips and her cheeks were very white as she sat down before her easel. The unfinished study—a plate of June apples—was before her. She worked absorbingly for two solid hours, then with a sigh she laid down her brushes and threw back her head to survey the result. She laughed hysterically. The fruit was perfect in proportion, charmingly arranged, the leaves were absolutely lifelike and exquisite. But the apples were purple!

* * * * * *

Dwight Ogden took up the receiver with eager fingers. All day he had waited in a fever of hope and fear to hear Margery's voice. But blank disappointment met him. As before—a dozen times perhaps—it was only a call from one of his patients, and he found himself wishing savagely that they were all dead—or well.

But the days came and went and drifted into weeks and there was no variation to the story. His disappointment turned into despair. She had then meant what she said—they could never be more than friends just because they happened to be cousins! Well, if she still persisted in her mulish course he could do likewise. If she was willing to sit passively and allow the prejudiced views of a fanatic to prevail over the deepest feelings of her heart, he was quite sure he could carry out his end of the bargain to the bitter end. After the things she had said to him it should be as he had stated in his letter: he had asked her to reconsider and marry him for the last time.

Thus the time dragged on.

There came a time when young Dr. Ogden forgot his own identity for many weary weeks. Stricken down with pneumonia, he raved in delirium till the pretty, gentle little nurse had to wipe her eyes more than once.
